THE FATHER OF WATERS ON RAMPAGE

MISSISSIPPI FLOODING FROM CAIRO TO THE GULF

People of the Valley Warned To Be Prepared For the Greatest Overflows In the History of the River—Dykes Give Way, Hundreds Seek Higher Ground and Hill Sections—Throw Up New Dykes At Esplanade Street, New Orleans—This City Is Eighteen Feet Below the River Level.

Thru driving rain Friday night, levee guards along Arkansas streams and levee engineers in the Hickman, Kentucky and Memphis, Tennessee, districts of the Mississippi river patrolled the great dykes or fought the intruding waters as the greatest flood in history moved down the drainage arteries.

Five hundred women and children carrying their household goods and driving livestock ahead of them, moved out of a new danger south of Hickman while 1200 men were battling flood dangers.

Columbus, Kentucky, was inundated 10 to 15 feet as the water sought its level behind a broken levee. It was feared the Hickman levees could not hold all the water in sight.

Thousands of acres of lowlands in the basins of the Arkansas, White and St. Francis rivers were under water in Arkansas. Hundreds of inhabitants were refugees in more elevated portions of the valley and other hundreds watched the turbulent tides swirling in or about their homes.

From Cottonwood Point, 110 miles north of Memphis, to the mouth of the White, 50 miles south of Helena, the government levees of the Mississippi were reported in prime condition, but their keepers mustered in every man and all machinery available to guard them against the ever-increasing weight of water that has been leaning heavily upon them for four weeks.

The Arkansas river reached 36.1 feet at Fort Smith, the highest stage in 94 years. Motor traffic thru the river valleys, where rain has been falling for days, is almost at a standstill, and train service has been interrupted at many points.

The White river levee at Jacksonport went out early Friday and a break near Clarendon was feared.

Just below Hornersville, Missouri, in northeastern Arkansas, the west side of Big Lake levee on the St. Francis collapsed. "Stages much above flood stage are indicated in the St. Francis," was the laconic forecast of the weather bureau.

More than an inch of rain fell Friday and precipitation continued steadily early in the night.

Farther upstream on the Mississippi the residents were alarmed over the prospect of 55.6 to 56 feet at Cairo, Illinois. Business at Hickman was virtually at a standstill and many stores have closed and removed their stock. A call for 300 additional workers for service on the Reelfoot levee was sent from Hickman. The crest is expected Sunday or Monday.

Ella Stout Lindsey will be a candidate for renomination as city auditor of Circleville, Ohio, in the coming primaries and solicits the support of her friends thruout the city.

Historic Naval Battle

One of the most momentous naval battles in all history was fought on March 9, 1862, when the Monitor met the oncoming Merrimac. This was a battle of iron and not of blood. Not one man was killed and only a few injured.

day, and much sand-bagging will be necessary if the waters are to be kept within the levees.

Residents were warned in New Orleans that the flood in the Mississippi river "will be the greatest on record," residents of the lower valley Friday were making strenuous efforts to confine the waters to the manmade barriers as the crest of the flood approaches.

Engineers at New Orleans continued to assert their belief that the levees in the vicinity would hold. However, at Esplanade avenue, 12 blocks below Canal street, in the center of the city, sandbags and a revetment already have been thrown into position to meet the emergency.

At that point the level of the water had reached within a few inches of the top of the levee and occasional waves from passing steamers or gusts of wind licked the bottom of sandbags. The river has almost three feet to rise before it reaches the crest forecast. The revised prediction called for a stage of from 22.5 to 23.2 between May 3 and 15.

There was no fear for the safety of New Orleans, however. The levees protecting the city have been raised since the 1922 flood and even should the river go over the top in places the city's pumping system was believed to be sufficient to care for the over flow.

EASTER PROGRAM AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Good Friday services at the Presbyterian church elicited an unusual interest. The afternoon service with its reading of the Crucifixion Story made an unusual appeal by its simplicity. At the evening service an unusually large audience was present for the observance of the Lord's Supper. The pastor preached a strong sermon on "The Four Dimensions of the Cross." Tomorrow the Easter program will be followed. The quartet will sing special Easter numbers. The afternoon vesper service at 4 o'clock will take the place of the usual evening service. A cantata, "The Dawn" by Baines will be sung by the Junior choir under the direction of Miss Helen Marion. The public is invited to attend.

EMPTY HOUSES IN COLUMBUS SURVEY MADE

Result of the survey made by the Columbus postoffice to determine the number of vacant dwellings and business places shows that there are 4238 vacant residences and 729 vacant storerooms and business places, it was announced Friday by James R. Geren, assistant postmaster.

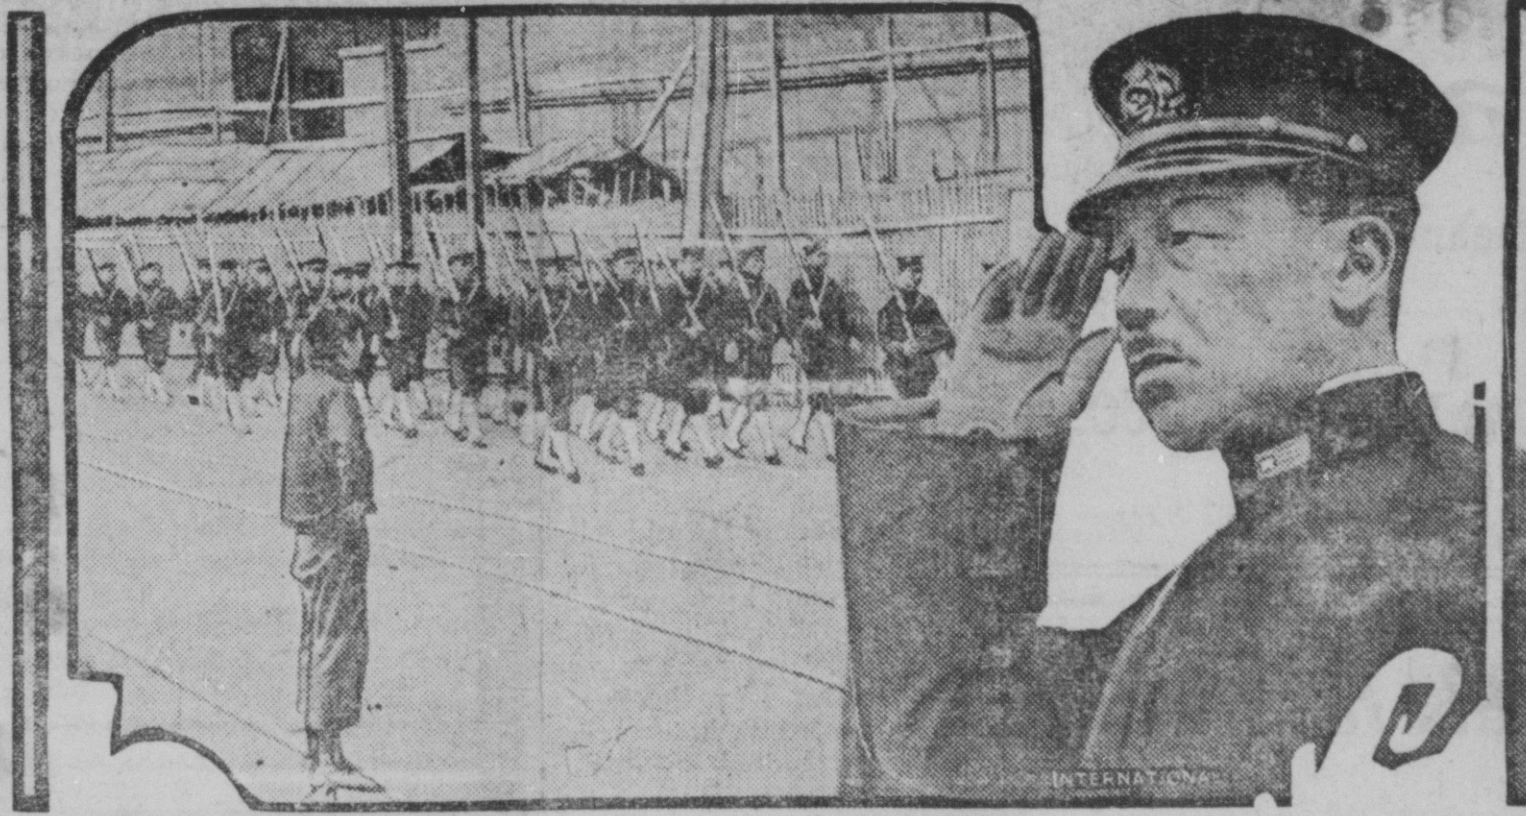

The survey by postoffice stations is as follows: Stations A and B in the north end of the city, 1159 vacant houses and 129 vacant storerooms; Station D, west side, 547 vacant residences and 58 vacant storerooms; Station E, east side 470 dwellings and 29 storerooms; Stations F and G south side, 683 residences and 102 storerooms; main office, representing the central portion of the city 547 dwellings and 329 storerooms.

The survey was made Thursday by the postmen simultaneously as they delivered their mail and follows a difference in figures reported by the gas companies and the Columbus Real Estate board. The former held there were some 5500 vacancies while the latter maintained the figure was nearer 4000.

Blick Breeden Run Over by Freight Train Has Slight Chance For Life.

Blick Breeden, aged 50, Sixth and Chestnut streets, Ironton, C. & O. work train conductor, was probably fatally injured early Friday when he was run over by an eastbound C. & O., freight near Beaver Creek, Pike county.

With both legs cut off between the ankle and knee, Breeden was found lying along the eastbound tracks about 3:15 a. m., by "Red" Dillow, brakeman on a westbound train.

He was rushed to the General hospital at Portsmouth in a G. O. Davis company ambulance and is being attended by Dr. A. P. Hunt of the hospital staff. Weakened by the loss of blood Breeden was accorded slight chance for his life.

Breeden, who has been staying at the C. & C. camp near Apex went to the Murray store Thursday night. The store is located near the railroad company's docks.

He left the store at a late hour. It is believed that he attempted to hop a ride on a freight train back to camp and in doing so fell under the wheels.

Breeden was conscious tho very weak when picked up. How long he had lain along the tracks, after the accident, is not known.

SCHOOL BOY NEAR DEATH BY DROWNING

Lynn Cook, Aged 14, Rescued Buel Gatterman From the Olentangy River.

"I just thought I never was going to see my mother again," declared cheery-faced Buel Gatterdam, 8 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gatterdam, 179 Dunedin road, Friday morning, for Buel was in deep trouble, Thursday afternoon and were it not for the heroic efforts of Lynn Cook, age 14, of 194 Montrose Way, he would have drowned in the waters of Olentangy river, Columbus.

Accompanied by Frank Williams, age 67, of 185 Dunedin road, Buel left his home about 3 o'clock to fish along the banks of the nearby river at a spot near the end of Northmoor place.

After setting his lines and waiting for an hour for the fish to nibble at his hook, Buel began to tire of the sport. Just a hundred feet away a group of seven children were swimming out over the river on a rope attached to a high tree. Buel thought playing with the children would be more fun than fishing. But he had been told not to swing on the rope as only eight weeks ago he had fallen in the river.

But the fish were not biting so Buel joined the group of children. Taking the rope in his hands he ran along the bank and swung out over the water. It was great fun.

After several swings he became careless. Abandoning caution, he grasped the rope loosely in his hands and flew thru the air again, only to lose his hold on the rope and fall into the river, which is 15 feet deep at the spot and a favorite swimming pool for older boys in the summer.

Screams of the frantic children attracted the attention of Cook, who was standing nearby with a friend, Russell Spencer, age 14, of 76 Northmoor place, watching a group of fishermen.

Hastily discarding his shoes, Cook jumped into the cold water and swam to the rescue.

Witnesses of the accident declared the drowning youth was carried down stream 100 yards before the rescue was effected.

Shortly before young Gatterdam lost his hold on the rope, an unidentified youth about 12 years old narrowly escaped a like experience when he lost his grip upon the rope while swimming. However, he fell just as the rope was beginning to carry him out of the water.

Gatterdam, who was recovering from the shock at his home, is a third grade pupil of Clinton Heights school. Young Cook, who is in his first year at North High school, is an expert swimmer and plans to try out for the North High school swimming team. He received swimming training at the Y. M. C. A.

"I will never play with the rope again," said Buel, who said that he had disobeyed his mother, who had warned him when he fell into the river eight weeks ago.

Lynn Cook, the young hero, is the son of Lloyd Cook, formerly of this city. He is a nephew of George Roof.

THERE'S A REASON

Why the Cured Meats From the Old Reliable John Groce & Son Packing House Are Superior.

The Herald visited the packing house of John Groce & Son in West High street, Thursday afternoon and was taken through the plant by Rae R. Bales, the owner of that old reliable industry.

The force at the time was engaged in removing hams and breakfast bacon from the sweet pickle in which they had been immersed for the past seventy days; in place of wiping off the meat with an old piece of burlap or other sacking as was the method of former days, the meat is thoroughly scrubbed under a shower of water before having it examined by a Government Inspector, after which it will be placed in the smoke-house where it is allowed to remain for a period of one week, which gives the hams and bacon that delicious hickory flavor.

The meats of this old reliable packing house are far superior to those of other packers, as a result of the curing and smoking process.

The business of the old reliable packing house operated for a number of years by Groce & Son, under the efficient management of the present progressive owner, is increasing by leaps and bounds, the meats being shipped all over the United States and border countries. Repeat orders are universal as the process of curing the meats, is a guarantee that they are far superior to the pack of any house in the United States, and in consequence are worth more than the average run of liquid-smoked pork.

One customer in Old Virginia, who swore by Smithfield hams, wrote Mr. Bales to the effect, that "the John Groce & Son hams and breakfast bacon, have Smithfield cure 'backed off the beach,' that they are sweet and juicy while Smithfield's are as dry as a bone."

Mr. Bales is fast putting Circleville on the map with epicures, through his delicious cured meats. Many of the leading hotels make a specialty of John Groce & Son meats on their bills of fare.

Purely American Bird

The humming bird is found only on the American continent. It is closely allied to the swift, and there are several hundred species native from Labrador to Patagonia. The humming bird does not exactly move backward, but by the use of the pectoral muscles of the wing beats the air with a rapidity which enables the bird to remain stationary and to make such darting movements that apparently the flight may be backward.

Snakes Used Medicinally

A French doctor says that in many houses in his district dried adders are preserved, and when any member of the family catches a cold or suffers from chills and fever, he is given a dose of liquid prepared from pieces of the dried snake boiled in water for a quarter of an hour. This opens the pores and causes the patient to perspire.

Pieces of dried snake are also sold by chemists to drive away, among other things, the rosy rash that accompanies measles.

EASTER

Easter, commemorating to Christian believers the Resurrection of the Saviour of Mankind, and almost universally observed as a day and time of joy and feasting, is the oldest of all the festivals in the Christian Calendar. Easter signifies the formal dawn of Spring. Winter is at an end, the trees and flowers, stirring from their slumbers and throwing off their coverlets of snow, put forth bud and blossom; there is balm in the air. It is the real awakening of the new year.

Easter even antedates Christmas as a day of Christian rejoicing. While Eostre or Pascha—ancient designation of the day—has been observed from the time of the foundation of the Christian religion, it was not until four centuries after the birth of Jesus of Nazareth, that His natal day was set apart for general commemoration. Indeed, the origin of the Easter festival is traced still further back into the past to the institution of the old Jewish Feast of the Passover. According to a Church historian, "The first Christians being derived from, or intimately connected with the Jewish Church, naturally continued to observe Jewish festivals, though in a new spirit, as commemorative of events of which those had been shadows. The Passover, ennobled by the thought of Christ as the true Pascal Lamb, continued to be celebrated and became the Christian Easter."

A modern instance of like adoption of ancient forms to Christian uses is reported by Galen M. Fisher in his "Creative Forces in Japan." One of them he says, "is the joyous Buddhist Feast of all Spirits, when torches and lanterns are set a-twinkling far and wide in the rice fields, and the candles are lighted indoors amid feasting and merriment. The change into a commemoration of All Saints, marked by a service of praise for departed relatives and friends, is being made by not a few churches. Another is the Shinto Feast of First Fruits, when the new rice is presented to the gods of fertility; it is found by Christians to be a natural occasion for a service of praise and thanksgiving to the Giver of all good."

As leading to the joyous observance of Easter, increasing importance has been attached by Christian peoples in later years to Long, or God's, or Good Friday, as it is variously known. As the day on which the tragedy of the Cross was enacted on the Hill of Golgotha, it is the most solemn and sacred in the Christian year. This note of solemnity is even reflected in the affairs of the secular world, most of the states of the nation having made it a legal holiday.

In the unfolding years the Easter season, with the Lenten period immediately preceding it, has received added emphasis in the general adaption of secular affairs to the spirit of the time. Theatrical and operatic enterprise lags, and save for charitable effort, society halts its activities. Especially notable has been the growth in recent years of the week day observance of the Lenten season as displayed in the giving over of theatres, halls and business stores in large cities to noon meetings at which leaders prominent among the clergy and laity strike the practical Christian note. These noon-day Lenten services are now a marked feature of the season, and it is not uncommon in cities like New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston and others in the South and West for crowds mounting into the thousands to assemble at the noon hour for these half hourly respites from worldly affairs.

There is a general let down in trade, too, preparatory to the awakening following Easter which, in a purely business way, has come to rank in importance with the Christmas season—not alone in its gift exchanging features, but in its more spiritual features. Musical genius has been as lavishly bestowed upon compositions breathing the Easter spirit, as it has been upon the birthday of the Christ child; and the musical programs on Easter Sunday in the larger churches have come to rank with those of the Christmas festival.

Early differences arose as to the precise day on which the Easter festival should be observed. In the Jewish Calendar the Passover occurs on a fixed day of the month. The Christians assigned Easter to Sunday, as the first day of the week and the day, according to Scripture, of the Resurrection. Astronomical problems of a complex character were largely responsible for those differences, which continued until the year 325 A. D. when the Council of Nicea decreed that everywhere in Christendom Easter should be observed on the same day. It was not until the adoption of the Gregorian calendar, however, that this decree, which fixed Easter as falling on the first Sunday after the full moon following the vernal equinox, secured anything like general acceptance. Even now, though the Gregorian Calendar has within the past two years been adopted in the Near East, there are some Oriental congregations in which Easter is observed sometimes before, and sometimes after, the date on which the festival is celebrated in the Western churches.

IT SEEMED very queer indeed to Violet Reed, to be in one of those basement book shops downtown in New York—yet there she was, a busy clerk behind the narrow counter.
Here, in New York Violet was earning her own living, going to and from the small Long Island town where she lived.It was rather an exciting life for George Reed's pretty daughter, though she knew nobody in town excepting her employer and fellow clerks. The former, Jeremiah Peasless, was an old man with the quickest mind and brightest eye that Violet had ever seen. She liked him, though, for his absolute honesty and squareness. She was glad to be there among the books and with the other girls who worked in the shop. There she could quite forget that she had ever known and loved a certain young man last summer, nearly a year ago.
He had gone home and she had never heard from him since.It was a beautiful day in May when Violet heard his voice again in the little bookshop! He was speaking to Mr. Peasless—and his tones brought a throb of Violet's heart.
He was asking for some very rare scientific work."I am sorry, Mr. Blade," Mr. Peas-less was shaking his head. "But we have only the second-hand copy—it has been much thumbed, of course—but it is good reading just the same."
"It wouldn't do at all, Jeremiah—
I want it for my own library—it must be a new copy."

"I can get you a new copy."

"Very well, then, please be sure to hold it for me!"Then, he was gone and Violet came out of her dim corner."Please take this order down on your book, Miss Reed, and afterwards, perhaps you would like a breath of fresh air. I want somebody to search the book shops for a brand-new copy of this book that Marcus Blade wants to buy.""Of course I shall be very glad to go," said Violet, and she hurried to put on her hat and wrap. She looked up at the sky and saw that it was blue, indeed, and somehow, just because she had actually heard Marcus Blade's voice after almost a year—she was thinking about him as she hurried down the street, wondering how it had happened that a man outwardly so true and fine should have courted her warmly, sincerely, all that wonderful summer, and then gone away without a word of farewell.She found the desired book in the fourth shop.Violet had been overjoyed that she had been able to buy the coveted book, and when the volume was wrapped, she paid for it, and left the store. As she left the door she found rain outside.The wet sidewalk was to prove disastrous for Violet Reed. She turned the corner briskly, collided with a tall man who also turned the corner from the opposite direction, and force of the contact sent Violet sharply back, so that she slipped and fell while the big book skittered across the wet walk."I am very sorry—I hope you are not hurt," said a familiar voice, as a pair of strong hands lifted her to her feet, and brushed her off, then he looked down into the girl's uplifted face, and his own whitened."Violet!" he gasped. "Is it really you?"She nodded, while she straightened her hat, and looked about for her book. And there it was! A small boy was holding it up."O, thank you!" exclaimed Violet, and she gave him a generous sum, while Marcus lifted the book and tucked it under his arm. He walked along beside Violet now, in the old way, carefully helping her at the cross-streets."This is heavy reading for a young girl," he jested."It is your own book!" said Violet and then she explained the circumstances.It was at the entrance to Peasless' book shop that he said something very important to the trembling girl at his side. He mentioned the letter he had written to her a year ago asking her to marry him. Having received no reply, he had simply taken it for granted that her answer was "No," and had swiftly gone home with his blasted hopes."I never received your letter!" exclaimed Violet."I put it in our rustic letter box in the orchard."

"I have never looked there!"

"Then, look, tonight, sweetheart.
Tell me, darling, what would have been your answer?" he whispered.The look in her brown eyes and her trembling lips told him, and she nodded, and turning, darted into the shop, while Marcus hurried after her carrying his own book.
That night Marcus was with Violet when she took her leisurely train homewards—he was with her when she went into the orchard toward the post office tree. The beloved letter was there in the little wooden box tucked up in a hollow place, and although the paper was damp and dis-colored from moisture, it was plainly readable, and Marcus unfolded her in his strong arms while she read it.
"Now, it is really true," sighed
Violet as she lifted her lips to his.SERVICES IN

AS OATH OF ROMANSOriginated From the Name of Twin Stars.Washington.—"By Jiminy!"
Many people have uttered this exclamation with no thought of where it came from. As a matter of fact, when you say "by Jiminy" you are swearing a Roman oath, by two of the Romans' favorite gods. And then, by looking in the southern sky on an evening in the late winter, the gods, or at least the stars which represent them, can be seen. These are the twins,
Gemini, the astronomer calls them, and so did the Romans, and when we consider the great changes that words may undergo in a few hundred years it seems little wonder that our modern "jiminy" is so similar to the original name.Favorite Stars of Sailors.
These stars, and the gods they represent, were special favorites of sailors, and often the figures of Castor and Pollux, the twins, were placed as figureheads on ships. In the Bible we are told that when St. Paul left the island of Malta, where he had been shipwrecked, he "departed in a ship of Alexandria, which had wintered in the isle whose sign was Castor and Pollux."But still earlier than Roman times,
Castor and Pollux were important.
Archeologists have often found in the ruins of ancient Babylon boundary stones and monuments with the "triad of stars"—the symbol of a crescent moon and two stars near it. These are among the oldest known records made by man, and they also are the oldest records of an astronomical event. The two stars are the twins.
The Babylonian priests, who were also the astronomers, regulated the calendar, and the year began when the twins and the new moon could be seen together in the western sky at dusk.
Now this happening comes at an entirely different time of year, on account of the motion of the stars, but we still are reminded of these ancient times, 6,000 years ago, by these Babylonian inscriptions.Binary Stars Not Uncommon.
Castor is the brighter of the twins, and is known as Alpha Gemini to the astronomer. This follows the usual meaning of stars, and so the name means that it is the brightest star in the constellation of Gemini. When it is seen through a telescope it is no longer a single orb, but is revealed as a pair of twin stars, or what astronomers call a binary star. Binary stars are not uncommon in the sky, for about one out of every eighteen that we can be shown as double by a large telescope, but Castor is one of the finest. Like all true double stars, the two members of the pair are continually revolving around each other.

Peer of Trappers Gets

15,600 Pests as Catch
Salt Lake City, Utah.—For eleven years Roy Mussalman has trapped on the Indian creek cattle range. He has lived a secluded life at his lonely cabin in Mormon creek pasture, Jack, a large, grizzly dog of undetermined ancestry, and Old Blue, his faithful horse, being his only companions. In this time he has caught 2,100 lynx, or bobcats, 6,000 coyotes, 1,500 foxes, 6,000 badgers and civet cats and numberless crows and small pests. Stockmen whose ranges he has protected consider he has no peer in the West as a trapper.

Insects Resist Fumigation

A great variation has been found in the resistance of different species of insects to carbon disulphide fumigation. In a saturated atmosphere of disulphide at about 90 degrees Fahrenheit, a bumblebee will die in a few seconds, while the saw-toothed grain beetle will live two hours.

MUCH FRUIT IS SHIPPED INTO STATE

Survey Shows State Plays Only a Minor Role in Supplying Own Market.

Residents of Ohio's four largest cities will have their fruit. Annually, now, the inhabitants of Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus and Toledo consume 20,000 carloads of fruit shipped in by rail and no one knows how much else shipped in by truck or bought at roadside stands. So reports C. W. Hauck, graduate student in rural economics at the Ohio State university on the basis of a U. S. Bureau of agricultural economics survey. These figures include apples, cantaloupes, grapefruit, grapes, lemons, oranges, peaches, strawberries and watermelons. There is at present no means of knowing the total consumption of fruit in these cities, Mr. Hauck points out, because growers ship much by trucks nowadays, and also sell at roadside stands. Ohio growers contributed only 340 carloads of 20,000 shipped into the four Ohio cities annually by rail. Tho many of these 20,000 cars carried grapefruit, oranges and lemons, fruits not grown in Ohio, the figures still indicate, Mr. Hauck believes that Ohio plays only a minor role in supplying her own markets with fruit.

Had to Admit Women
The admission of women to Phi Beta Kappa was obviously not intended by the founders, but fidelity to the test of scholarship required it. Women were first admitted by the Alpha of Vermont in 1875.

FOLKSBURG ITEMS

Joe Dodds has bought a four year old flivver to go back and forth into his job at the planing mill. He figures that the time he'll save that way will soon pay for the machine. He can get up fifteen minutes later of a morning now and still get to work on time.

Mrs. Ed Thomas finally prevailed upon Ed to take her over to Bromwell today to hear a noted lady speaker that's to be there. They didn't get started very early and Mrs. Thomas was worried a good deal thinking they'd be late. But Ed didn't seem much concerned and acted like if they got there after it was all over that would suit him first rate.

Mrs. Amanda Bell has bought a new davenport for her front room. She thought it would be all she'd need for a long time, but now she sees that she'll have to get several other things to match up or else it will look out of place.

After the rumor got out that maybe the basket factory would have to lay off some of the help for a while Smith Collins, who works down there has taken a lot of pains to act terribly busy on the job. And yesterday when he had planned to go rabbit hunting they wouldn't let him off, for they said it looked like he was too busy to lose any time.

Miss Henrietta Nichols, who has a position as stenographer in the office of Attorney Parks, has taken up needle work and is reported to be turning out several handkerchiefs a day.

Our hydrant water has had a terribly rusty taste these last few days, and a good many people can't drink it. Wesley Hills has been all over town hunting water he can drink and can't find any. He went in Ezra Breeden's restaurant thinking a bowl of soup would stop his craving, but he says Ezra's soup hasn't weakened the bad taste in the water any that he can tell.

Miss Daisy Bell has just handed us the poem which we recently warned the readers she was writing. She wants to know do we think the editor will print it. Naturally, we can't say what anybody will do except ourselves, and not always then. But we told her he had nerve enough to try it is she did, so here it is:

Saturday Night in Town.
Folks from bigger places
Sometimes want to know
If in a town like ours
Things ain't awfully slow.

An' if that's their notion
We'd like to set 'em right
By havin' them see us
On some Saturday night!

Supper's hardly over
When the fun commences
Everybody's rushin'
Like they'd lost their senses.

Pa must shave real quick
And mother's got the glass
Sister flies around
Puttin' on high class.

Can't be bothered now
Got to hurry down
Lots of things to see
Saturday night in town.

All along the streets
Flivvers packed in tight
People from the country
Stayin' late tonight.

Minglin' on the corners
Men a swappin' views,
Voices everywhere
Women passin' news.

Girls dressed in their best
Keep a strollin' by
Boys in groups a watchin'

Transportation in China
The Kalgan railway was built by the Chinese to take over the traffic that has been performed since the dawning of civilization by the shaggy Bactrian camels of central Asia. The line stretches from Peking, through the Nankau pass and across several mountain ridges to Kalgan. There the caravans still take up their burdens for the arduous trek across the Gobi. The pass, the mountains, the desert-like plains beyond, are bleak and forbidding. There is a compelling fascination, however, about this country that arises from the mystery that surrounds it and the ferocity of the hungry hutes who infest it. There is something delightfully fearful in its aspect. A man of imagination, looking at the rugged mountains, has an almost insatiable craving to learn at least a hint of what is hidden behind their buttresses.—William Ashley Anderson in Adventure Magazine.

We think well of an antagonist whose argument we can answer.

AMUSEMENTS

The Eagle of the Sea! What thoughts that phrase must bring to mind! Galleons of gold! Merchant ships! Men-o-war! Valiant vessels! Bold buccaneers! Plundering pirates!

All these will be seen at the Met theater when Frank Lloyd's first Paramount production, "The Eagle of the Sea," makes its local debut. This Charles Tenney Jackson story traces the life of Jean Lafitte, noted American pirate, from the day he adopts the name "Captain Sazarc," until he wins the woman of his heart. Needless to say, this is only accomplished after many hazardous voyages, like ly adventures and fierce fights.

History tells us that Lafitte won amnesty for himself and devil-dog crew when they helped "Old Hickory" Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans. All became respected citizens with the solitary exception of their captain. He broke his parole and disappeared. A reward was then offered for his capture—dead or alive.

With this colorful past, Jean Lafitte arrives in New Orleans seven years later, just at a time when General Jackson's return is being celebrated. There he falls in love with Colonel Lestron's lovely niece, Louise. His courtship progresses very nicely until—Jackson recognizes him and she vehemently voices her dislike of men such as Lafitte.

Then—things started happening. But they come in such surprising fashion that each presents a greater thrill than the one preceding it. Florence Vidor, justly called "the orchid lady of the screen" is featured as is Ricardo Cortez, playing the most spectacular role of his career, that of Jean Lafitte.

The Retreater

Oswald Garrison Villard, the famous New York reformer, was criticizing Fascism.

"Mussolini has been having hard luck," he said. "He accuses France of protecting anti-Fascists, and France proves straight off that these anti inside her boundaries are Mussolini's paid agents—agents provocateurs. He accuses his political opponents of murder and so forth, and—presto—his own supporters jump in and assassinate an opposition senator."

Mr. Villard laughed. "It seems," he said, "as if every time Mussolini turns the limelight on himself it hits him in the back."—Detroit Free Press.

Ivory Auction Draws

Dealers to London

Every three months London holds a great ivory auction in Mincing lane. Tusks of elephant, hippo and wild boar are put on view and cover several acres, popularly known as "the ivory floor." The walrus and narwhal also contribute. At an auction held recently some forty tons of this valuable article of commerce resulted in brisk bidding.

The ivory handled in this London market arrives from various parts of Africa. It is said that elephants, living in herds, elect when possible to die in a community cemetery.

People who know an elephant's tusks only as they appear on the living animals are invariably surprised at the great length of the tusks displayed for sale. It is explained that nearly half of the tusk is carried inside.

Guiding the Car

It is practically indispensable that an automobile wheel should be managed with two hands, but they should always be mates.—Butte Miner.

Batteryless Flashlight

Army experts are experimenting with a batteryless flashlight. They have constructed a flashlight which contains its own generator. The motive power that runs the generator is supplied by a spring that winds up like a clock. A single winding will furnish a continuous light for three minutes.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Infirmities of Age

"So your uncle died from the infirmities of age."

"Yes, the chauffeur who ran over him said poor old uncle seemed unable to hear, see or jump."—Boston Transcript.

Wide Pants, Short Skirt Start Rumanian Riot

Bucharest, Rumania.—Armed police had to be called upon here to rescue Rumanian duds, exponents of the "charleston" trousers, as Oxford bags are called here, and pea jackets and pancake hats, from a mob of self-appointed sartorial censors who asserted their esthetic sensibilities had been outraged by the exotic raiment. One youth, cornered by 200 men, was forced to promise to change his trousers. Police rescued him and, with drawn bayonets to keep back the crowd, took him to the station house. The fair sex is not escaping the attentions of the censors. Several girls with skirts considered too short have been the objects of demonstrations, but thus far there have been no casualties, either to skirts or breezy trousers.

PLANS FOR THE BIG FRANCE LEGION PARADE

Sent By Cable to Commander—Five Miles Long Through Heart of Paris.

Columbus, April 15.—A five mile line of parade of The American Legion through the heart of Paris on the opening day of the national convention next September has been tentatively agreed upon, it was announced today by J. J. Saslavsky, of Columbus, Department France Convention Officer of this state, upon information received from Howard P. Savage, National Commander of the Legion. A cablegram from the French capital to Commander Savage announced that the line of march had been mapped out by James F. Barton, National Adjutant of the Legion; Bowman Elder, National Chairman of The France Convention Committee; John L. Wicker, Jr., National Travel Director, and Albert Greenlaw, resident member of the France Convention Committee in Paris, after consultation with French officials.

The parade will lead through the heart of the downtown Paris along streets followed by victorious armies for centuries. A holiday has been declared Sept. 19, the day of the parade and the greater part of the three million population of the gay capital will be along the line of march. Ferdinand Foch, Marshal of France and supreme commander of the Allied Armies; General John J. Pershing, wartime commander of the A. E. F., and Howard P. Savage, National Commander of The American Legion, will be among the distinguished officials in the reviewing stand. General Gouraud, military governor of Paris, a wartime commander known to thousands of American soldiers, co-operated in arrangements for the coming parade.

The host of Legionnaires will gather for the parade in the Place des Invalides. Towering above the veterans will be the dome of this famous structure which houses the tomb of Napoleon and the relics won on blood soaked fields of Europe by the Poilus. From this central point the veterans will proceed down the Avenue du Gallieni, named in honor of the moving spirit of the "taxicab" army hurled in the face of the Germans as they advanced almost to the French capital. The tramp of the Legionnaires will then be heard as they cross the tranquil waters of the River Seine on the bridge of Alexander III.

The veteran host will then turn left down the Court Reine, for a long time held for the exclusive use of the Royal family enroute to Versailles. The parade will then lead down the Court Albert I, then west to the Place de Alma further west on the Avenue President Wilson, named in honor of our wartime commander-in-chief. The line of march will then be right to the Avenue d'Iena and on to the Arch d'Triomphe. Here rests the immortal remains of the French unknown soldier, representative of a million men who died in battle in northern France and Belgium.

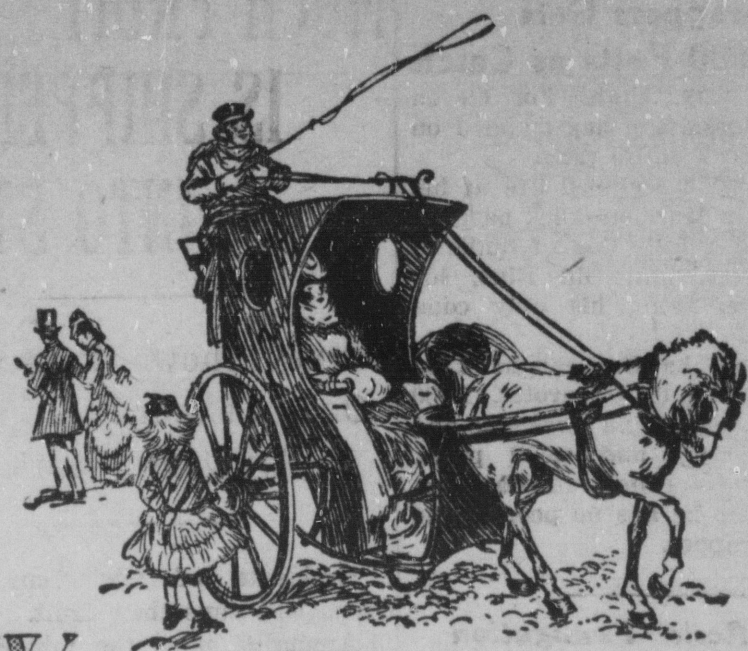

The veterans will then pass down the world famous Avenue des Champs-Elysees to the Place de la Concorde. Here stands an Egyptian obelisk, the counterpart of Cleopatra's needle, marking the exact spot where stood the guillotine during the days of the bloody revolution.

The flags leading the veterans will then turn left down the Rue Royale and into the Grand Boulevards. The parade will lead along the Boulevards Madeleine; des Italiens; Poissoniere; past the old stone gate of Port St. Denis and then south along the Boulevard des Sebastopol; to the Rue Rivoli and then west to the Jardin des Tuilleries, in the heart of the famous shopping district of the French capital. Here the veterans will disband.

The great number of musicians and bandsmen that have made reservations and the international aspect of the parade promise to make it the most colorful in the history of national Legion conventions.

WAS THE WATCH YOU CARRY NEW... WHEN HANSOMS RULED THE STREETS?

A watch may never lose a second yet be many years slow

The owner of such a watch may never miss a train or an appointment but it is the one false note in his modern makeup, probably the only thing he has that stamps him as a bit old-fashioned, a trifle behind the times. And yet a new and modish Elgin can be had at a moderate sum. Slipped into your pocket, or strapped on your wrist, it will win and hold your affection as no other watch possibly can. For Elgin is conceded to be the world's standard for watch integrity.

THE WOMAN'S WRIST WATCH, in a case of 14-karat solid white gold, is priced at $60. THE MAN'S WATCH may be had in a 14-karat gold-filled case of white or green tone. Sells for $40.

We will show these and other Elgins to you gladly. No other watch is offered in so generous an assortment of styles nor at a price range so liberal.

Earthquake Wave

Seismologists say that every great earthquake causes pulsations which extend for thousands of miles in all directions on the globe, and one eminent authority has likened such pulsations to the long, long swells that sweep across the ocean. Not long ago an attempt was made to measure the height and length of waves of an earthquake that occurred in Greece, the pulsations of which were perceived by the aid of a specially constructed pendulum at Birmingham, England. The pulsations, or waves, passed through the rocky crust of the earth with a velocity of about two miles a second, and each of the largest of them, according to the inventor, must have been about 28 miles in length, but only half an inch in height.—Washington Star.

Paper From Cornstalks

Promised by Professor

Ames, Iowa.—Corn belt farmers may soon be able to turn their cornstalks into money.

Paper can be made from the stalks, but this knowledge has done the corn grower no good because there has been no way found to harvest the stalks in quantities large enough to justify their substitution for wood pulp by the paper factories.

Now E. V. Collins, professor of agricultural engineering at Iowa State college, has devised a machine which he believes will do the work. It snaps the stalk off at the root, separates the shucked corn into one wagon and puts the stalk, after shredding it for baling, into another.

Poisonous Upas Tree

Upas is the name given to various species of trees found in Java and other islands of the Eastern archipelago. From these trees ooze a poisonous gum, used by the natives for tipping their arrows. The tales of the deadly effect of this tree on plants and animals in its vicinity are largely fictitious.

Karakul Mutton

The mutton of karakul sheep is said to be the most palatable of any breed, and the fat is also considered a delicacy by the Bokharans, being used by them instead of butter.

Easter Millinery Is More Artistic

Big Brimmed Hat Is in Front Ranks; Milan in Lead Among Straws.

The story of the new Easter millinery can now be told, for the authoritative imprint of the leading style experts of the country has been stamped indelibly upon those artistic creations which have been occupying the attention of designers for some months past.

Also—and this is important to the woman who wants to be correct in her attire—the spring colors for millinery have been selected and they will play a most important part—as might be expected—in the ensembles that the April sun will shine on. Some of the leading tints will be cameo pink, Castilian red, hydrangea blue, popcorn, meadow pink, monkeyskin, and tiger lily.

The big brimmed hat will play a star role in the millinery drama. It made its advent rather shyly last year, like an elder sister at her first coming-out party, but this season it seems to have had no scruples in shouldering its way to the front ranks. Straws will dominate with the always popular Milan easily taking the lead. Woven bodies will play the second part, and horsehair comes next. Trimmings are not especially elaborate, but flowers, feathers, ribbon bows and ornaments will brighten the millinery picture in the successful attempt to get away from the hat monotony of the past few years. The keynote, however, is diversification in the fullest sense of the word, for the rebellion of women against the hat for every occasion has given way to open-armed reception of the hat for each occasion.

In the smaller models, of which there will be an infinite variety the coming season, woven viscous, milans and combinations of felt and straw are here for my lady to revel in. Those extreme styles of the fall and winter have met their Waterloo, and have been effectively routed. The crushed stovepipe that Reboux of Paris thought would sweep the feminine world has gone, never to return, together with a few other models too bizarre to suit American taste. In their places has come a veritable avalanche of beautiful creations, varied enough as to shapes, designs and trimmings to enable every woman, no matter what her requirements, to select hats that will best express her individuality and suit her personal taste. For general as well as for more formal wear ribbon crowns and straw brims make a charming combination. The perennially popular felts will be in the minority, although there will be some sports models with, for instance, quill treatments that will lift them out of the ordinary.

Ostrich feathers used as trimmings and made up in short boas or chapeau ruffs, to use the latest phrase, have really arrived at last. Their grace, their adaptability, and their beauty have at last triumphed over the craze for standardized severity. They will be distinctly in the mode for the coming months.

In the small viscous hats, of which there will be many this year, the price range will be wide, depending, of course, upon the quality of the material and the closeness of the weave. The same thing, naturally, applies to all the milans.

Women who take a pardonable pride in their millinery, will, according to present indications, have no cause for complaint this season.

Bandanas the Rage

"Yes, we have bandanas." That is what the modiste says nowadays when asked about scarfs. The latest scarfs are of the handkerchief type fastened on one shoulder with a large gold pin bearing initial or monogram. The smartest are inspired by the old French peasant handkerchiefs and are made in either wool or silk. The colors cannot be too glaring since red and green is a favored combination.

Curling the Hair

The new style in hair dressing for elderly British women is to have their hair curled like a barrister's wig. If the hair is gray it makes it all the more effective. Worn with pearls and a black velvet frock, the style is attractive.

EMPLOYMENT INDEX HIGHER LAST MONTH

Sales of Automobiles Decrease While Output of Accessories Was Greater.

The Ohio employment index was higher for March than it was for the same month last year and lower than for February this year, Dr. Spurgeon Bell, director of Ohio State university bureau of business research showed today in a survey of conditions.

As to prosperity of industries, iron and steel showed a healthy growth, the review said. The continuation of activity in the trade accounted for the very favorable employment conditions.

Department stores sales which generally follow the trend of employment show as a whole little change. Sales in some districts—Cleveland for example—show one-half of one per cent interest over sales for the same period last year.

Present indications were said to be that department store sales would remain at about the same level for the next two months.

Construction contracts in Ohio measured in terms of floor space were slightly higher than for March 1926. For the country as a whole the value of contracts showed less difference for the contracted periods.

The sales of automobiles showed a decrease, while the output of accessories was greater than last year.

Bank debits and checks were larger than for March last year and there appeared to be an abundant supply of loanable funds at rates slightly lower than those prevailing at this time last year.

Current prospects pointed to a continuation of prosperous conditions on a basis not far from the level of 1926.

Tracing Use of Stamps

The first stamp of an official nature was that used by the postmaster of New York in 1842. Shortly afterward the law of 1845 established uniform postage at low rates, and postmasters in a number of cities issued stamps on their own responsibility. Such provisional issues of stamps were made in 1845 by postmasters in nine cities.

Reptile Inspires Fear

The domestic fowl will ignore any reptile, but a lapwing, curlew, or snipe will dash away from one as quickly as its wings will carry it. A parrot that has been kept in captivity for many years will show the greatest panic at the sight of a harmless grass snake.

ALPHABET BORN IN MIND OF EGYPTIAN

Theory Advanced by Chicago Scientist.

Picture a Semite thinker in old Egypt poring over a tablet of Egyptian picture writing. He knows something about the Egyptian hieroglyphics, how the sign for house, for example, is a boxlike drawing, vaguely suggestive of a child's picture of a house. Probably he knows how to write his name in the Egyptian, piecing it together in a series of simple signs to make up the sounds. And he has an idea.

From one inscription or a single series of inscriptions, the Semite, with a little help, perhaps, from an Egyptian friend, picks out some twenty-two signs that represent different consonant sounds in words. With these few signs, he believes, a kind of writing can be done that will be easier to spell out than the picture puzzles of the Egyptian. The signs he has chosen as letters are set down in the order of their appearance on the Egyptian inscription. And so the first crude alphabet is devised and ready for changes and improvements by other thinkers of many countries.

This theory as to how the alphabet was invented and how the letters were set down in order has just been advanced by Dr. B. L. Ullman of the University of Chicago. Doctor Ullman, who presented his theory at a meeting of archeologists at Cambridge, believes that the alphabet may be of greater antiquity than most scholars have considered likely.

The oldest specimens of writing believed to be in alphabet form are the crude Semite inscriptions found at Sinai in 1905. These inscriptions, Doctor Ullman said, have been generally dated as late as 1500 B. C., and that date has been widely used in recent years as the time of invention of alphabetic writing.

But three years ago inscriptions in Phoenician alphabetic writing almost as old as the Sinai writings were found at Byblos, in Syria. The letters of these inscriptions were considerably less crude than the Sinai writing, and Doctor Ullman points out that such progress in use of the alphabet as these Phoenician inscriptions show could not have taken place in one or two centuries.

The Sinai writings, he says, are probably quite as old as the most daring speculators have suggested. From this he is "inclined to set the origin of the alphabet at about 2000 B. C., namely about the Nineteenth century B. C., or earlier—fully 1,000 years earlier than was commonly believed a few years ago."

According to Doctor Ullman's conclusions, the Greeks must have got their alphabet from the Phoenicians much earlier than the Ninth or Tenth century B. C., which is the time generally accepted by scientists.

"The old Greek tradition," he said, "was that the alphabet was introduced by Cadmus in 1313 B. C. My view is that this may be right, and in any case the Twelfth century is the latest possible date for the epoch-making event."

"Thus," he concludes, "the Greek alphabet may have existed at the time of the Trojan war, and must have existed when the Homeric poems were composed."

Exchange of Information

A very pleasant arrangement providing for an exchange of expert information of the subject of road construction has been arrived at between the United States and Germany. All data on construction methods, costs and results of experiments, as well as new machinery, will be transmitted from one to the other, and as both countries are giving a great deal of attention to this subject at the present time it is anticipated that the results will be very gratifying and helpful to both countries. This arrangement grew out of the visit to Berlin of the American delegates to the International Road congress, which took place in Milan a few months ago.

Strategy Saved Town

Wishing to extend the training grounds of a camp near the village of Villiedieu, in the Vosges, the French military authorities decided to wipe out the little town by gunfire.

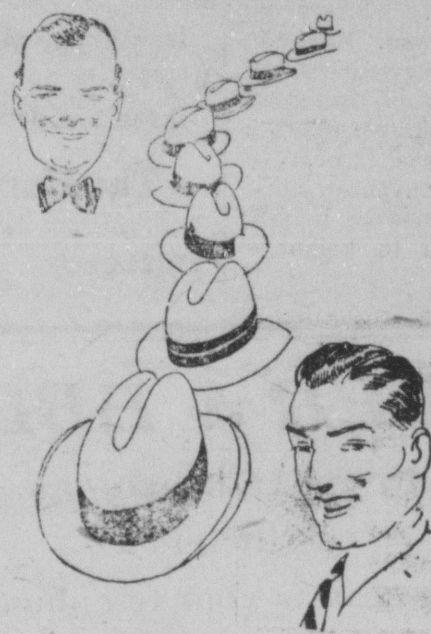

Their scheme has, however, been thwarted by the parish priest, who determined to do what he could to save the village from destruction. He searched through volumes of the laws of France, and found that his church could not be closed down so long as there were two attendants at daily mass. Since then the church has been thronged every day with villagers, who thus render the authorities powerless to carry out the destruction.

New Scholastic Idea

One semester each year for three years is spent in an industry as nearly allied as possible to their chosen line of work by students in the department of engineering at the College of the Pacific, Stockton, Calif. During the fifth year students remain continuously in college. This is said to be the only college west of the Mississippi following the co-operative plan of instruction, under which students are enabled, after the freshman year, to gain valuable first-hand experience in the work they expect to follow as a profession and at the same time to support themselves while attending college.

SHORTS AND MIDLINGS

The European corn borer isn't the only insect that bores holes in cornstalks. Stalks sent to the Ohio State university from Clinton county this spring indicate the presence in southern Ohio of what is called the larger cornstalk borer, an insect usually found farther south and east. As yet it is no menace.

Says Sam: The man from Missouri doesn't ask to be shown this time. Saye he, together with other corn belt farmers, "Stop that Borer!"

Early fall beats spring as a time to feed the lawn.

Two million trees have been shipped to 390 landowners in 65 Ohio counties this spring from state forest nurseries.

Camps for farm women were held in nine Ohio counties in 1926, the agricultural college extension service at Columbus reports.

A sweet clover harvester that cuts the stalks and gets 85 or 90 per cent of the seed has been invented by H. P. Miller of Curtice, Ottawa, county.

THE FATHER OF WATERS ON RAMPAGE

MISSISSIPPI FLOODING FROM CAIRO TO THE GULF

People of the Valley Warned To Be Prepared For the Greatest Overflows In the History of the River—Dykes Give Way, Hundreds Seek Higher Ground and Hill Sections—Throw Up New Dykes At Esplanade Street, New Orleans—This City Is Eighteen Feet Below the River Level.

Thru driving rain Friday night, levee guards along Arkansas streams and levee engineers in the Hickman, Kentucky and Memphis, Tennessee, districts of the Mississippi river patrolled the great dykes or fought the intruding waters as the greatest flood in history moved down the drainage arteries.

Five hundred women and children carrying their household goods and driving livestock ahead of them, moved out of a new danger south of Hickman while 1200 men were battling flood dangers.

Columbus, Kentucky, was inundated 10 to 15 feet as the water sought its level behind a broken levee. It was feared the Hickman levees could not hold all the water in sight.

Thousands of acres of lowlands in the basins of the Arkansas, White and St. Francis rivers were under water in Arkansas. Hundreds of inhabitants were refugees in more elevated portions of the valley and other hundreds watched the turbulent tides swirling in or about their homes.

From Cottonwood Point, 110 miles north of Memphis, to the mouth of the White, 50 miles south of Helena, the government levees of the Mississippi were reported in prime condition, but their keepers mustered in every man and all machinery available to guard them against the ever-increasing weight of water that has been leaning heavily upon them for four weeks.

The Arkansas river reached 36.1 feet at Fort Smith, the highest stage in 94 years. Motor traffic thru the river valleys, where rain has been falling for days, is almost at a standstill, and train service has been interrupted at many points.

The White river levee at Jacksonport went out early Friday and a break near Clarendon was feared.

Just below Hornersville, Missouri, in northeastern Arkansas, the west side of Big Lake levee on the St. Francis collapsed. "Stages much above flood stage are indicated in the St. Francis," was the laconic forecast of the weather bureau.

More than an inch of rain fell Friday and precipitation continued steadily early in the night.

Farther upstream on the Mississippi the residents were alarmed over the prospect of 55.6 to 56 feet at Cairo, Illinois. Business at Hickman was virtually at a standstill and many stores have closed and removed their stock. A call for 300 additional workers for service on the Reelfoot levee was sent from Hickman. The crest is expected Sunday or Monday.

Historic Naval Battle

One of the most momentous naval battles in all history was fought on March 9, 1862, when the Monitor met the oncoming Merrimac. This was a battle of iron and not of blood. Not one man was killed and only a few injured.

day, and much sand-bagging will be necessary if the waters are to be kept within the levees.

Residents were warned in New Orleans that the flood in the Mississippi river "will be the greatest on record," residents of the lower valley Friday were making strenuous efforts to confine the waters to the manmade barriers as the crest of the flood approaches.

Engineers at New Orleans continued to assert their belief that the levees in the vicinity would hold. However, at Esplanade avenue, 12 blocks below Canal street, in the center of the city, sandbags and a revetment already have been thrown into position to meet the emergency.

At that point the level of the water had reached within a few inches of the top of the levee and occasional waves from passing steamers or gusts of wind licked the bottom of sandbags. The river has almost three feet to rise before it reaches the crest forecast. The revised prediction called for a stage of from 22.5 to 23.2 between May 3 and 15.

There was no fear for the safety of New Orleans, however. The levees protecting the city have been raised since the 1922 flood and even should the river go over the top in places the city's pumping system was believed to be sufficient to care for the over flow.

EASTER PROGRAM AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Good Friday services at the Presbyterian church elicited an unusual interest. The afternoon service with its reading of the Crucifixion Story made an unusual appeal by its simplicity. At the evening service an unusually large audience was present for the observance of the Lord's Supper. The pastor preached a strong sermon on "The Four Dimensions of the Cross." Tomorrow the Easter program will be followed. The quartet will sing special Easter numbers. The afternoon vesper service at 4 o'clock will take the place of the usual evening service. A cantata, "The Dawn" by Baines will be sung by the Junior choir under the direction of Miss Helen Marion. The public is invited to attend.

EMPTY HOUSES IN COLUMBUS SURVEY MADE

Result of the survey made by the Columbus postoffice to determine the number of vacant dwellings and business places shows that there are 4238 vacant residences and 729 vacant storerooms and business places, it was announced Friday by James R. Geren, assistant postmaster.

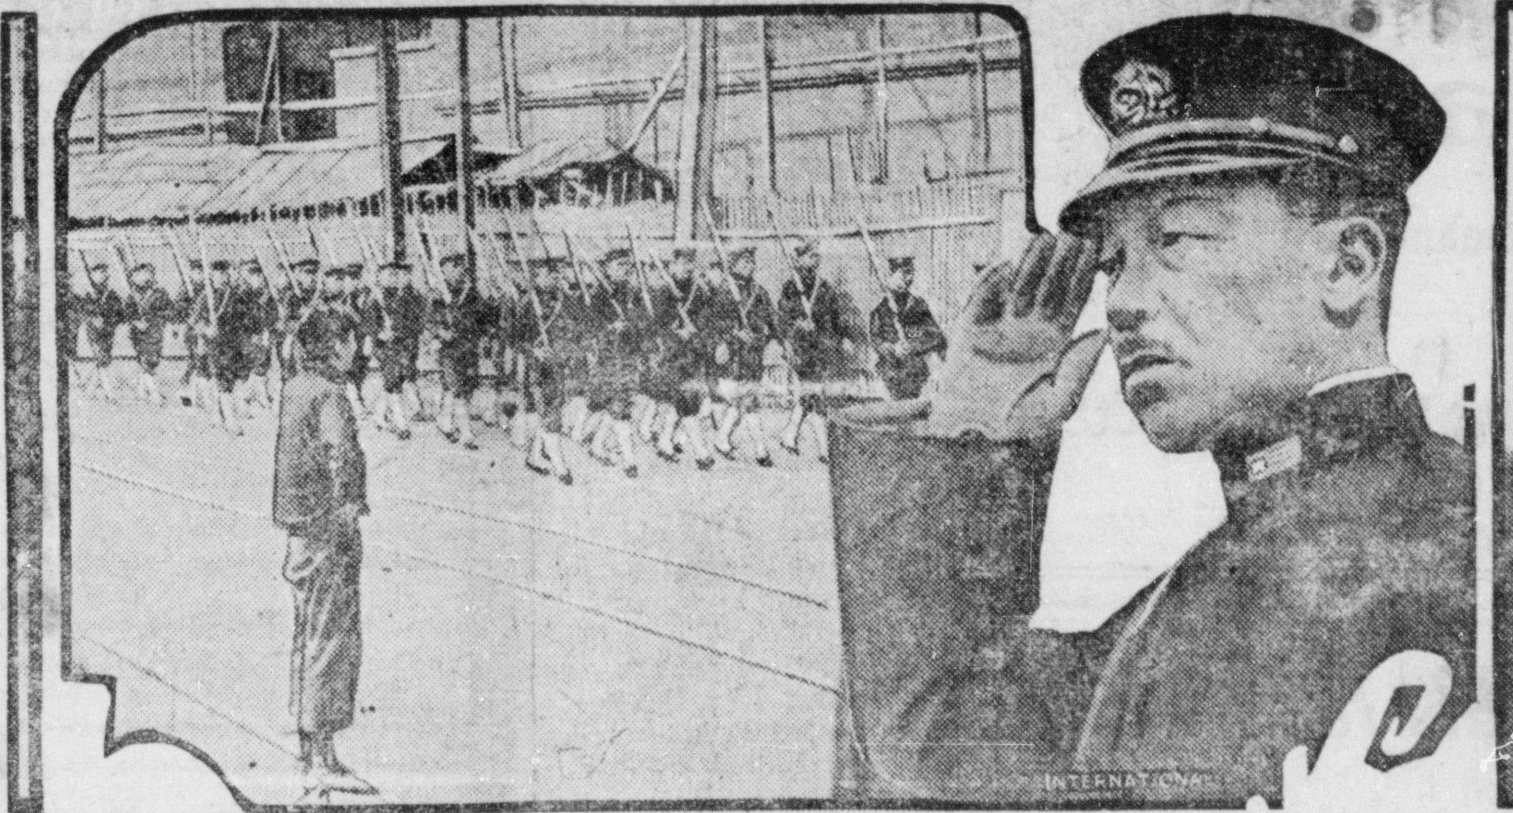

The survey by postoffice stations is as follows: Stations A and B in the north end of the city, 1159 vacant houses and 129 vacant storerooms; Station D, west side, 547 vacant residences and 58 vacant storerooms; Station E, east side 470 dwellings and 29 storerooms; Stations F and G south side, 683 residences and 102 storerooms; main office, representing the central portion of the city 547 dwellings and 329 storerooms.

The survey was made Thursday by the postmen simultaneously as they delivered their mail and follows a difference in figures reported by the gas companies and the Columbus Real Estate board. The former held there were some 5500 vacancies while the latter maintained the figure was nearer 4000.

Blick Breeden Run Over by Freight Train Has Slight Chance For Life.

Blick Breeden, aged 50, Sixth and Chestnut streets, Ironton, C. & O. work train conductor, was probably fatally injured early Friday when he was run over by an eastbound C. & O., freight near Beaver Creek, Pike county.

With both legs cut off between the ankle and knee, Breeden was found lying along the eastbound tracks about 3:15 a. m., by "Red" Dillow, brakeman on a westbound train.

He was rushed to the General hospital at Portsmouth in a G. O. Davis company ambulance and is being attended by Dr. A. P. Hunt of the hospital staff. Weakened by the loss of blood Breeden was accorded slight chance for his life.

Lynn Cook, Aged 14, Rescued Buel Gatterman From the Olentangy River.

"I just thought I never was going to see my mother again," declared cheery-faced Buel Gatterdam, 8 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gatterdam, 179 Dunedin road, Friday morning, for Buel was in deep trouble, Thursday afternoon and were it not for the heroic efforts of Lynn Cook, age 14, of 194 Montrose Way, he would have drowned in the waters of Olentangy river, Columbus.

Accompanied by Frank Williams, age 67, of 185 Dunedin road, Buel left his home about 3 o'clock to fish along the banks of the nearby river at a spot near the end of Northmoor place.

After setting his lines and waiting for an hour for the fish to nibble at his hook, Buel began to tire of the sport. Just a hundred feet away a group of seven children were swimming out over the river on a rope attached to a high tree. Buel thought playing with the children would be more fun than fishing. But he had been told not to swing on the rope as only eight weeks ago he had fallen in the river.

But the fish were not biting so Buel joined the group of children. Taking the rope in his hands he ran along the bank and swung out over the water. It was great fun.

After several swings he became careless. Abandoning caution, he grasped the rope loosely in his hands and flew thru the air again, only to lose his hold on the rope and fall into the river, which is 15 feet deep at the spot and a favorite swimming pool for older boys in the summer.

Screams of the frantic children attracted the attention of Cook, who was standing nearby with a friend, Russell Spencer, age 14, of 76 North moor place, watching a group of fishermen.

Hastily discarding his shoes, Cook jumped into the cold water and swam to the rescue.

Witnesses of the accident declared the drowning youth was carried down stream 100 yards before the rescue was effected.

Shortly before young Gatterdam lost his hold on the rope, an unidentified youth about 12 years old narrowly escaped a like experience when he lost his grip upon the rope while swimming. However, he fell just as the rope was beginning to carry him out of the water.

Gatterdam, who was recovering from the shock at his home, is a third grade pupil of Clinton Heights school. Young Cook, who is in his first year at North High school, is an expert swimmer and plans to try out for the North High school swimming team. He received swimming training at the Y. M. C. A.

"I will never play with the rope again," said Buel, who said that he had disobeyed his mother, who had warned him when he fell into the river eight weeks ago.

Lynn Cook, the young hero, is the son of Lloyd Cook, formerly of this city. He is a nephew of George Roof.

THERE'S A REASON

Why the Cured Meats From the Old Reliable John Groce & Son Packing House Are Superior.

The Herald visited the packing house of John Groce & Son in West High street, Thursday afternoon and was taken through the plant by Rae R. Bales, the owner of that old reliable industry.

The force at the time was engaged in removing hams and breakfast bacon from the sweet pickle in which they had been immersed for the past seventy days; in place of wiping off the meat with an old piece of burlap or other sacking as was the method of former days, the meat is thoroughly scrubbed under a shower of water before having it examined by a Government Inspector, after which it will be placed in the smoke-house where it is allowed to remain for a period of one week, which gives the hams and bacon that delicious hickory flavor.

The meats of this old reliable packing house are far superior to those of other packers, as a result of the curing and smoking process.

The business of the old reliable packing house operated for a number of years by Groce & Son, under the efficient management of the present progressive owner, is increasing by leaps and bounds, the meats being shipped all over the United States and border countries. Repeat orders are universal as the process of curing the meats, is a guarantee that they are far superior to the pack of any house in the United States, and in consequence are worth more than the average run of liquid-smoked pork.

One customer in Old Virginia, who swore by Smithfield hams, wrote Mr. Bales to the effect, that "the John Groce & Son hams and breakfast bacon, have Smithfield cure 'backed off the beach,' that they are sweet and juicy while Smithfield's are as dry as a bone."

Mr. Bales is fast putting Circleville on the map with epicures, through his delicious cured meats. Many of the leading hotels make a specialty of John Groce & Son meats on their bills of fare.

Purely American Bird

The humming bird is found only on the American continent. It is closely allied to the swift, and there are several hundred species native from Labrador to Patagonia. The humming bird does not exactly move backward, but by the use of the pectoral muscles of the wing beats the air with a rapidity which enables the bird to remain stationary and to make such darting movements that apparently the flight may be backward.

Snakes Used Medicinally

A French doctor says that in many houses in his district dried adders are preserved, and when any member of the family catches a cold or suffers from chills and fever, he is given a dose of liquid prepared from pieces of the dried snake boiled in water for a quarter of an hour. This opens the pores and causes the patient to perspire.

Pieces of dried snake are also sold by chemists to drive away, among other things, the rosy rash that accompanies measles.

Lucky Amethyst

The amethyst, February's birthstone, is the most beautiful and noteworthy of all purple jewels. Described by a Fifteenth-century writer as "purple red in color medelyd wyth color of uyolette," it is one of the few precious stones that can, if one is superstitious, be worn at all times and in all places without incurring ill-luck. It is a favorite ring stone and is used by many as a lovers' pledge.

EASTER

Easter, commemorating the Christian believers the Resurrection of the Saviour of Mankind, and almost universally observed as a day and time of joy and feasting, is the oldest of all the festivals in the Christian Calendar. Easter signifies the formal dawn of Spring. Winter is at an end, the trees and flowers, stirring from their slumbers and throwing off their coverlets of snow, put forth bud and blossom; there is balm in the air. It is the real awakening of the new year.

Easter even antedates Christmas as a day of Christian rejoicing. While Eostre or Pascha—ancient designation of the day—has been observed from the time of the foundation of the Christian religion, it was not until four centuries after the birth of Jesus of Nazareth, that His natal day was set apart for general commemoration. Indeed, the origin of the Easter festival is traced still further back into the past to the institution of the old Jewish Feast of the Passover. According to a Church historian, "The first Christians being derived from, or intimately connected with the Jewish Church, naturally continued to observe Jewish festivals, though in a new spirit, as commemorative of events of which those had been shadows. The Passover, ennobled by the thought of Christ as the true Pascal Lamb, continued to be celebrated and became the Christian Easter."

A modern instance of like adoption of ancient forms to Christian uses is reported by Galen M. Fisher in his "Creative Forces in Japan." One of them he says, "is the joyous Buddhist Feast of all Spirits, when torches and lanterns are set a-twinkling far and wide in the rice fields, and the candles are lighted indoors amid feasting and merriment. The change into a commemoration of All Saints, marked by a service of praise for departed relatives and friends, is being made by not a few churches. Another is the Shinto Feast of First Fruits, when the new rice is presented to the gods of fertility; it is found by Christians to be a natural occasion for a service of praise and thanksgiving to the Giver of all good."

As leading to the joyous observance of Easter, increasing importance has been attached by Christian peoples in later years to Long, or God's, or Good Friday, as it is variously known. As the day on which the tragedy of the Cross was enacted on the Hill of Golgotha, it is the most solemn and sacred in the Christian year. This note of solemnity is even reflected in the affairs of the secular world, most of the states of the nation having made it a legal holiday.

In the unfolding years the Easter season, with the Lenten period immediately preceding it, has received added emphasis in the general adaption of secular affairs to the spirit of the time. Theatrical and operatic enterprise lags, and save for charitable effort, society halts its activities. Especially notable has been the growth in recent years of the week day observance of the Lenten season as displayed in the giving over of theatres, halls and business stores in large cities to noon meetings at which leaders prominent among the clergy and laity strike the practical Christian note. These noon-day Lenten services are now a marked feature of the season, and it is not uncommon in cities like New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston and others in the South and West for crowds mounting into the thousands to assemble at the noon hour for these half hourly respites from worldly affairs.

There is a general let down in trade, too, preparatory to the awakening following Easter which, in a purely business way, has come to rank in importance with the Christmas season—not alone in its gift exchanging features, but in its more spiritual features. Musical genius has been as lavishly bestowed upon compositions breathing the Easter spirit, as it has been upon the birthday of the Christ child; and the musical programs on Easter Sunday in the larger churches have come to rank with those of the Christmas festival.

Early differences arose as to the precise day on which the Easter festival should be observed. In the Jewish Calendar the Passover occurs on a fixed day of the month. The Christians assigned Easter to Sunday, as the first day of the week and the day, according to Scripture, of the Resurrection. Astronomical problems of a complex character were largely responsible for those differences, which continued until the year 325 A. D. when the Council of Nicea decreed that everywhere in Christendom Easter should be observed on the same day. It was not until the adoption of the Gregorian calendar, however, that this decree, which fixed Easter as falling on the first Sunday after the full moon following the vernal equinox, secured anything like general acceptance. Even now, though the Gregorian Calendar has within the past two years been adopted in the Near East, there are some Oriental congregations in which Easter is observed sometimes before, and sometimes after, the date on which the festival is celebrated in the Western churches.

Oil as Locomotive Fuel

According to the Department of Commerce, the first experiments in the United States which resulted in the continued utilization of oil as a locomotive fuel were made by the Central Pacific railroad at its Sacramento (Calif.) shops in 1879, when oil brought by boat from the Atlantic coast was burned in the firebox of an eight-wheel locomotive built to burn wood, but at that time using coal.

Just How It Happened

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

IT SEEMED very queer indeed to Violet Reed, to be in one of those basement book shops downtown in New York—yet there she was, a busy clerk behind the narrow counter. Here, in New York Violet was earning her own living, going to and from the small Long Island town where she lived.

It was rather an exciting life for George Reed's pretty daughter, though she knew nobody in town excepting her employer and fellow clerks. The former, Jeremiah Peasless, was an old man with the quick mind and brightest eye that Violet had ever seen. She liked him, though, for his absolute honesty and squareness. She was glad to be there among the books and with the other girls who worked in the shop. There, she could quite forget that she had ever known and loved a certain young man last summer, nearly a year ago. He had gone home and she had never heard from him since.

It was a beautiful day in May when Violet heard his voice again in the little bookshop! He was speaking to Mr. Peasless—and his tones brought a throb of Violet's heart.

He was asking for some very rare scientific work.

"I am sorry, Mr. Blade," Mr. Peasless was shaking his head. "But we have only the second-hand copy—it has been much thumbed, of course—but it is good reading just the same."

"It wouldn't do at all, Jeremiah—I want it for my own library—it must be a new copy."

"I can get you a new copy."

"Very well, then, please be sure to hold it for me!"

Then, he was gone and Violet came out of her dim corner.

"Please take this order down on your book, Miss Reed, and afterwards, perhaps you would like a breath of fresh air. I want somebody to search the book shops for a brand-new copy of this book that Marcus Blade wants to buy."

"Of course I shall be very glad to go," said Violet, and she hurried to put on her hat and wrap. She looked up at the sky and saw that it was blue, indeed, and somehow, just because she had actually heard Marcus Blade's voice after almost a year—she was thinking about him as she hurried down the street, wondering how it had happened that a man outwardly so true and fine should have courted her warmly, sincerely, all that wonderful summer, and then gone away without a word of farewell.

She found the desired book in the fourth shop.

Violet had been overjoyed that she had been able to buy the coveted book, and when the volume was wrapped, she paid for it, and left the store. As she left the door she found rain outside.

The wet sidewalk was to prove disastrous for Violet Reed. She turned the corner briskly, collided with a tall man who also turned the corner from the opposite direction, and force of the contact sent Violet sharply back, so that she slipped and fell while the big book skittered across the wet walk.

"I am very sorry—I hope you are not hurt," said a familiar voice, as a pair of strong hands lifted her to her feet, and brushed her off, then he looked down into the girl's uplifted face, and his own whitened.

"Violet!" he gasped. "Is it really you?"

She nodded, while she straightened her hat, and looked about for her book. And there it was! A small boy was holding it up.

"O, thank you!" exclaimed Violet, and she gave him a generous sum, while Marcus lifted the book and tucked it under his arm. He walked along beside Violet now, in the old way, carefully helping her at the cross-streets.

"This is heavy reading for a young girl," he jested.

"It is your own book!" said Violet and then she explained the circumstances.

It was at the entrance to Peasless' book shop that he said something very important to the trembling girl at his side. He mentioned the letter he had written to her a year ago asking her to marry him. Having received no reply, he had simply taken it for granted that her answer was "No," and had swiftly gone home with his blasted hopes.

"I never received your letter!" exclaimed Violet.

"I put it in our rustic letter box in the orchard."

"I have never looked there!"

"Then, look, tonight, sweetheart. Tell me, darling, what would have been your answer?" he whispered.

The look in her brown eyes and her trembling lips told him, and she nodded, and turning, darted into the shop, while Marcus hurried after her carrying his own book.

That night Marcus was with Violet when she took her leisurely train homewards—he was with her when she went into the orchard toward the post office tree. The beloved letter was there in the little wooden box tucked up in a hollow place, and although the paper was damp and discolored from moisture, it was plainly readable, and Marcus unfolded her in his strong arms while she read it.

"Now, it is really true," sighed Violet as she lifted her lips to his.

American Naval Hero

The body of James Lawrence was restored to the United States and the funeral was held at Salem, Mass., August 23, 1813, after which the body was buried in Trinity church yard, New York city. On the tombstone, as on the quarterdeck of the Constitution, the ship on which he gained his promotion, the legend was written "Don't give up the ship."

DEFINE 'BY JIMINY' AS OATH OF ROMANS

Originated From the Name of Twin Stars.

Washington.—"By Jiminy!" Many people have uttered this exclamation with no thought of where it came from. As a matter of fact, when you say "by Jiminy" you are swearing a Roman oath, by two of the Romans' favorite gods. And then, by looking in the southern sky on an evening in the late winter, the gods, or at least the stars which represent them, can be seen. These are the twins, Gemini, the astronomer calls them, and so did the Romans, and when we consider the great changes that words may undergo in a few hundred years it seems little wonder that our modern "jiminy" is so similar to the original name.

Favorite Stars of Sailors.

These stars, and the gods they represent, were special favorites of sailors, and often the figures of Castor and Pollux, the twins, were placed as figureheads on ships. In the Bible we are told that when St. Paul left the island of Malta, where he had been shipwrecked, he "departed in a ship of Alexandria, which had wintered in the isle whose sign was Castor and Pollux."

But still earlier than Roman times, Castor and Pollux were important. Archeologists have often found in the ruins of ancient Babylon boundary stones and monuments with the "triad of stars"—the symbol of a crescent moon and two stars near it. These are among the oldest known records made by man, and they also are the oldest records of an astronomical event. The two stars are the twins. The Babylonian priests, who were also the astronomers, regulated the calendar, and the year began when the twins and the new moon could be seen together in the western sky at dusk. Now this happening comes at an entirely different time of year, on account of the motion of the stars, but we still are reminded of these ancient times, 6,000 years ago, by these Babylonian inscriptions.

Binary Stars Not Uncommon.

Castor is the brighter of the twins, and is known as Alpha Gemini to the astronomer. This follows the usual meaning of stars, and so the name means that it is the brightest star in the constellation of Gemini. When it is seen through a telescope it is no longer a single orb, but is revealed as a pair of twin stars, or what astronomers call a binary star. Binary stars are not uncommon in the sky, for about one out of every eighteen that we see can be shown as double by a large telescope, but Castor is one of the finest. Like all true double stars, the two members of the pair are continually revolving around each other.

It pays to Advertise.

Locating Streets by Name

In Mexico City it is usually possible to tell the general location of a street by the character of its name. Thus, in one section of the city all streets bear the names of trees or flowers, in another section the names of popular heroes, and so on.

Peer of Trappers Gets

15,600 Pests as Catch

Salt Lake City, Utah.—For eleven years Roy Mussalman has trapped on the Indian creek cattle range.

He has lived a secluded life at his lonely cabin in Mormon creek pasture, Jack, a large, grizzly dog of undetermined ancestry, and Old Blue, his faithful horse, being his only companions.

In this time he has caught 2,100 lynx, or bobcats, 6,000 coyotes, 1,500 foxes, 6,000 badgers and civet cats and numberless crows and small pests. Stockmen whose ranges he has protected consider he has no peer in the West as a trapper.

Insects Resist Fumigation

A great variation has been found in the resistance of different species of insects to carbon disulphide fumigation. In a saturated atmosphere of disulphide at about 90 degrees Fahrenheit, a bumblebee will die in a few seconds, while the saw-toothed grain beetle will live two hours.

MUCH FRUIT IS SHIPPED INTO STATE

Survey Shows State Plays Only a Minor Role in Sup- plying Own Market.

Residents of Ohio's four largest cities will have their fruit.

Annually, now, the inhabitants of Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus and Toledo consume 20,000 carloads of fruit shipped in by rail and no one knows how much else shipped in by truck or bought at roadside stands.

So reports C. W. Hauck, graduate student in rural economics at the Ohio State university on the basis of a U. S. Bureau of agricultural economics survey. These figures include apples, cantaloupes, grapefruit, grapes, lemons, oranges, peaches, strawberries and watermelons.

There is at present no means of knowing the total consumption of fruit in these cities, Mr. Hauck points out, because growers ship much by trucks nowadays, and also sell at roadside stands.

Ohio growers contributed only 340 carloads of 20,000 shipped into the four Ohio cities annually by rail. The many of these 20,000 cars carried grapefruit, oranges and lemons, fruits not grown in Ohio, the figures still indicate, Mr. Hauck believes that Ohio plays only a minor role in supplying her own markets with fruit.

Had to Admit Women

The admission of women to Phi Beta Kappa was obviously not intended by the founders, but fidelity to the test of scholarship required it. Women were first admitted by the Alpha of Vermont in 1875.

FOLKSBURG ITEMS

Joe Dodds has bought a four year old flivver to go back and forth into his job at the planing mill. He figures that the time he'll save that way will soon pay for the machine. He can get up fifteen minutes later of a morning now and still get to work on time.

Mrs. Ed Thomas finally prevailed upon Ed to take her over to Bromwell today to hear a noted lady speaker that's to be there. They didn't get started very early and Mrs. Thomas was worried a good deal thinking they'd be late. But Ed didn't seem much concerned and acted like if they got there after it was all over that would suit him first rate.

Mrs. Amanda Bell has bought a new davenport for her front room. She thought it would be all she'd need for a long time, but now she sees that she'll have to get several other things to match up or else it will look out of place.

After the rumor got out that maybe the basket factory would have to lay off some of the help for a while Smith Collins, who works down there has taken a lot of pains to act terribly busy on the job. And yesterday when he had planned to go rabbit hunting they wouldn't let him off, for they said it looked like he was too busy to lose any time.

Miss Henrietta Nichols, who has a position as stenographer in the office of Attorney Parks, has taken up needle work and is reported to be turning out several handkerchiefs a day.

Our hydrant water has had a terribly rusty taste these last few days, and a good many people can't drink it. Wesley Hills has been all over town hunting water he can drink and can't find any. He went in Ezra Breeden's restaurant thinking a bowl of soup would stop his craving, but he says Ezra's soup hasn't weakened the bad taste in the water any that he can tell.

Miss Daisy Bell has just handed us the poem which we recently warned the readers she was writing. She wants to know do we think the editor will print it. Naturally, we can't say what anybody will do except ourselves, and not always then. But we told her he had nerve enough to try it is she did, so here it is:

Saturday Night in Town.

Folks from bigger places
Sometimes want to know
If in a town like ours
Things ain't awfully slow.

An' if that's their notion
We'd like to set 'em right
By havin' them see us
On some Saturday night!

Supper's hardly over
When the fun commences
Everybody's rushin'
Like they'd lost their senses.

Pa must shave real quick
And mother's got the glass
Sister flies around
Puttin' on high class.

Can't be bothered now
Got to hurry down
Lots of things to see
Saturday night in town.

All along the streets
Flivvers packed in tight
People from the country
Stayin' late tonight.

Minglin' on the corners
Men a swappin' views,
Voices everywhere
Women passin' news.

Girls dressed in their best
Keep a strollin' by
Boys in groups a watchin'
Tryin' to catch their eye.

Barber shops is crowded
Can't get in the stores
Movie show is full
Clear up to the doors.

Round and round the square
Feet a paddin' down
Lots of sights to see
Saturday night in town.

Transportation in China

The Kalgan railway was built by the Chinese to take over the traffic that has been performed since the dawn of civilization by the shaggy Bactrian camels of central Asia. The line stretches from Peking, through the Nankau pass and across several mountain ridges to Kalgan. There the caravans still take up their burdens for the arduous trek across the Gobi. The pass, the mountains, the desert-like plains beyond, are bleak and forbidding. There is a compelling fascination, however, about this country that arises from the mystery that surrounds it and the ferocity of the hungry hutes who infest it. There is something delightfully fearful in its aspect. A man of imagination, looking at the rugged mountains, has an almost insatiable craving to learn at least a hint of what is hidden behind their buttresses.—William Ashley Anderson in Adventure Magazine.

We think well of an antagonist whose argument we can answer.

AMUSEMENTS

The "Eagle of the Sea!" What thoughts that phrase must bring to mind! Galleons of gold! Merchant ships! Men-o-war! Valiant vessels! Bold buccaneers! Plundering pirates!

All these will be seen at the Met theater when Frank Lloyd's first Paramount production, "The Eagle of the Sea," makes its local debut. This Charles Tenney Jackson story traces the life of Jean Lafitte, noted American pirate, from the day he adopts the name "Captain Sazarak," until he wins the woman of his heart. Needless to say, this is only accomplished after many hazardous voyages, like adventures and fierce fights.

History tells us that Lafitte won amnesty for himself and devil-dog crew when they helped "Old Hickory" Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans. All became respected citizens with the solitary exception of their captain. He broke his parole and disappeared. A reward was then offered for his capture—dead or alive.

With this colorful past, Jean Lafitte arrives in New Orleans seven years later, just at a time when General Jackson's return is being celebrated. There he falls in love with Colonel Lestron's lovely niece, Louise. His courtship progresses very nicely until—Jackson recognizes him and she vehemently voices her dislike of men such as Lafitte.

Then—things started happening. But they come in such surprising fashion that each presents a greater thrill than the one preceding it. Florence Vidor, justly called "the orchid lady of the screen" is featured as is Ricardo Cortez, playing the most spectacular role of his career, that of Jean Lafitte.

The Retreater

Oswald Garrison Villard, the famous New York reformer, was criticizing Fascism.

"Mussolini has been having hard luck," he said. "He accuses France of protecting anti-Fascists, and France proves straight off that these anti's inside her boundaries are Mussolini's paid agents—agents provocateurs. He accuses his political opponents of murder and so forth, and—presto—his own supporters jump in and assassinate an opposition senator."

Mr. Villard laughed. "It keeps," he said, "as if every time Mussolini turns the limelight on himself it hits him in the back."—Detroit Free Press.

Ivory Auction Draws

Dealers to London

Every three months London holds a great ivory auction in Mincing lane. Tusks of elephant, hippo and wild boar are put on view and cover several acres, popularly known as "the ivory floor." The walrus and narwhal also contribute. At an auction held recently some forty tons of this valuable article of commerce resulted in brisk bidding.

The ivory handled in this London market arrives from various parts of Africa. It is said that elephants, living in herds, elect when possible to die in a community cemetery.

People who know an elephant's tusks only as they appear on the living animals are invariably surprised at the great length of the tusks displayed for sale. It is explained that nearly half of the tusk is carried inside.

Guiding the Car

It is practically indispensable that an automobile wheel should be managed with two hands, but they should always be mates.—Butte Miner.

Batteryless Flashlight

Army experts are experimenting with a batteryless flashlight. They have constructed a flashlight which contains its own generator. The motive power that runs the generator is supplied by a spring that winds up like a clock. A single winding will furnish a continuous light for three minutes.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Wide Pants, Short Skirt Start Rumanian Riot

Bucharest, Rumania.—Armed police had to be called upon here to rescue Rumanian dudes, exponents of the "charleston" trousers, as Oxford bags are called here, and pea jackets and pancake hats, from a mob of self-appointed sartorial censors who asserted their esthetic sensibilities had been outraged by the exotic raiment.

One youth, cornered by 200 men, was forced to promise to change his trousers. Police rescued him and, with drawn bayonets to keep back the crowd, took him to the station house.

The fair sex is not escaping the attentions of the censors. Several girls with skirts considered too short have been the objects of demonstrations, but thus far there have been no casualties, either to skirts or breezy trousers.

PLANS FOR THE BIG FRANCE LEGION PARADE

Sent By Cable to Commander—Five Miles Long Through Heart of Paris.

Columbus, April 15.—A five mile line of parade of The American Legion through the heart of Paris on the opening day of the national convention next September has been tentatively agreed upon, it was announced today by J. J. Saslavsky, of Columbus, Department France Convention Officer of this state, upon information received from Howard P. Savage, National Commander of the Legion. A cablegram to Commander Savage announced that the line of march had been mapped out by James F. Barton, National Adjutant of the Legion; Bowman Elder, National Chairman of The France Convention Committee; John L. Wicker, Jr., National Travel Director, and Albert Greenlaw, resident member of the France Convention Committee in Paris, after consultation with French officials.

The parade will lead through the heart of the downtown Paris along streets followed by victorious armies for centuries. A holiday has been declared Sept. 19, the day of the parade and the greater part of the three million population of the gay capital will be along the line of march. Ferdinand Foch, Marshal of France and supreme commander of the Allied Armies; General John J. Pershing, wartime commander of the A. E. F., and Howard P. Savage, National Commander of The American Legion, will be among the distinguished officials in the reviewing stand. General Gouraud, military governor of Paris, a wartime commander known to thousands of American soldiers, co-operated in arrangements for the coming parade.

The host of Legionnaires will gather for the parade in the Place des Invalides. Towering above the veterans will be the dome of this famous structure which houses the tomb of Napoleon and the relics won on blood soaked fields of Europe by the Poilus. From this central point the veterans will proceed down the Avenue du Gallieni, named in honor of the moving spirit of the "taxicab" army hurled in the face of the Germans as they advanced almost to the French capital. The tramp of the Legionnaires will then be heard as they cross the tranquil waters of the River Seine on the bridge of Alexander III.

The veteran host will then turn left down the Court Reine, for a long time held for the exclusive use of the Royal family enroute to Versailles. The parade will then lead down the Court Albert I, then west to the Place de Alma further west on the Avenue President Wilson, named in honor of our wartime commander-in-chief. The line of march will then be right to the Avenue d'Iena and on to the Arch d'Triomphe. Here rests the immortal remains of the French unknown soldier, representative of a million men who died in battle in northern France and Belgium.

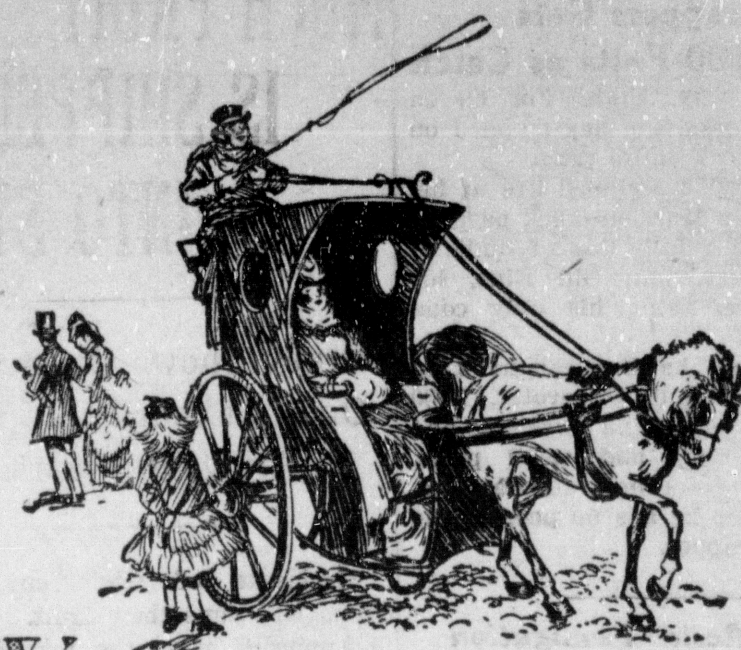

The veterans will then pass down the world famous Avenue des Champs-Elysees to the Place de la Concorde. Here stands an Egyptian obelisk, the counterpart of Cleopatra's needle, marking the exact spot where stood the guillotine during the days of the bloody revolution.

The flags leading the veterans will then turn left down the Rue Royale and into the Grand Boulevards. The parade will lead along the Boulevards Madeleine; des Italiens; Poissoniere; past the old stone gate of Port St. Denis and then south along the Boulevard des Sebastopol; to the Rue Rivoli and then west to the Jardin des Tuilleries, in the heart of the famous shopping district of the French capital. Here the veterans will disband.

The great number of musicians and bandmen that have made reservations and the international aspect of the parade promise to make it the most colorful in the history of national Legion conventions.

The owner of such a watch may never miss a train or an appointment but it is the one false note in his modern makeup, probably the only thing he has that stamps him as a bit old-fashioned, a trifle behind the times. And yet a new and modish Elgin can be had at a moderate sum. Slipped into your pocket, or strapped on your wrist, it will win and hold your affection as no other watch possibly can. Earthquake Wave

Seismologists say that every great earthquake causes pulsations which extend for thousands of miles in all directions on the globe, and one eminent authority has likened such pulsations to the long, low swells that sweep across the ocean. Not long ago an attempt was made to measure the height and length of waves of an earthquake that occurred in Greece, the pulsations of which were perceived by the aid of a specially constructed pendulum at Birmingham, England. The pulsations, or waves, passed through the rocky crust of the earth with a velocity of about two miles a second, and each of the largest of them, according to the inventor, must have been about 28 miles in length, but only half an inch in height.—Washington Star.

Paper From Cornstalks Promised by Professor
Ames, Iowa.—Corn belt farmers may soon be able to turn their cornstalks into money.
Paper can be made from the stalks, but this knowledge has done the corn grower no good because there has been no way found to harvest the stalks in quantities large enough to justify their substitution for wood pulp by the paper factories.
Now E. V. Collins, professor of agricultural engineering at Iowa State college, has devised a machine which he believes will do the work. It snaps the stalk off at the root, separates the shucked corn into one wagon and puts the stalk, after shredding it by baling, into another.

Wild Animals Fear Snakes
Dangerous snakes in Great Britain are so rare that cattle show no fear of them, but any foreign deer will be in a state of panic if a snake is placed near it. The elephant ignores the largest snakes for he knows that his thick hide is a safe armor against their attacks. On the other hand, large mammals such as the lion and tiger will quickly run off from the presence of a snake.

Poisonous Upas Tree

Upas is the name given to various species of trees found in Java and other islands of the Eastern archipelago. From these trees ooze a poisonous gum, used by the natives for tipping their arrows. The tales of the deadly effect of this tree on plants and animals in its vicinity are largely fictitious.

Karakul Mutton

The mutton of karakul sheep is said to be the most palatable of any breed, and the fat is also considered a delicacy by the Bokharans, being used by them instead of butter.

Easter Millinery Is More Artistic

Big Brimmed Hat Is in Front Ranks; Milan in Lead Among Straws.

The story of the new Easter millinery can now be told, for the authoritative imprint of the leading style experts of the country has been stamped indelibly upon those artistic creations which have been occupying the attention of designers for some months past.

Also—and this is important to the woman who wants to be correct in her attire—the spring colors for millinery have been selected and they will play a most important part—as might be expected—in the ensembles that the April sun will shine on. Some of the leading tints will be cameo pink, Castilian red, hydrangea blue, popcorn, meadow pink, monkeyskin, and tiger lily.

The big brimmed hat will play a star role in the millinery drama. It made its advent rather shyly last year, like an elder sister at her first coming-out party, but this season it seems to have had no scruples in shouldering its way to the front ranks. Straws will dominate with the always popular Milan easily taking the lead. Woven bodies will play the second part, and horsehair comes next. Trimmings are not especially elaborate, but flowers, feathers, ribbon bows and ornaments will brighten the millinery picture in the successful attempt to get away from the hat monotony of the past few years. The keynote, however, is diversification in the fullest sense of the word, for the rebellion of women against the hat for every occasion has given way to open-armed reception of the hat for each occasion.

In the smaller models, of which there will be an infinite variety the coming season, woven viscous, milans and combinations of felt and straw are here for my lady to revel in. Those extreme styles of the fall and winter have met their Waterloo, and have been effectively routed. The crushed stovepipe that Reboux of Paris thought would sweep the feminine world has gone, never to return, together with a few other models too bizarre to suit American taste. In their places has come a veritable avalanche of beautiful creations, varied enough as to shapes, designs and trimmings to enable every woman, no matter what her requirements, to select hats that will best express her individuality and suit her personal taste. For general as well as for more formal wear ribbon crowns and straw brims make a charming combination. The perennially popular felts will be in the minority, although there will be some sports models with, for instance, quill treatments that will lift them out of the ordinary.

Ostrich feathers used as trimmings and made up in short boas or chapeau ruffs, to use the latest phrase, have really arrived at last. Their grace, their adaptability, and their beauty have at last triumphed over the craze for standardized severity. They will be distinctly in the mode for the coming months.

In the small visca hats, of which there will be many this year, the price range will be wide, depending, of course, upon the quality of the material and the closeness of the weave. The same thing, naturally, applies to all the milans.

Women who take a pardonable pride in their millinery, will, according to present indications, have no cause for complaint this season.

Bandanas the Rage

"Yes, we have bandanas." That is what the modiste says nowadays when asked about scarfs. The latest scarfs are of the handkerchief type fastened on one shoulder with a large gold pin bearing initial or monogram. The smartest are inspired by the old French peasant handkerchiefs and are made in either wool or silk. The colors cannot be too glaring since red and green is a favored combination.

Curling the Hair

The new style in hair dressing for elderly British women is to have their hair curled like a barrister's wig. If the hair is gray it makes it all the more effective. Worn with pearls and a black velvet frock, the style is attractive.

EMPLOYMENT INDEX HIGHER LAST MONTH

Sales of Automobiles Decrease While Output of Accessories Was Greater.

The Ohio employment index was higher for March than it was for the same month last year and lower than for February this year, Dr. Spurgeon Bell, director of Ohio State university bureau of business research showed today in a survey of conditions.

As to prosperity of industries, iron and steel showed a healthy growth, the review said. The continuation of activity in the trade accounted for the very favorable employment conditions.

Department stores' sales which generally follow the trend of employment show as a whole little change. Sales in some districts—Cleveland for example—show one-half of one per cent interest over sales for the same period last year.

Present indications were said to be that department store sales would remain at about the same level for the next two months.

Construction contracts in Ohio measured in terms of floor space were slightly higher than for March 1926. For the country as a whole the value of contracts showed less difference for the contracted periods.

The sales of automobiles showed a decrease, while the output of accessories was greater than last year.

Bank debits and checks were larger than for March last year and there appeared to be an abundant supply of loanable funds at rates slightly lower than those prevailing at this time last year.

Current prospects pointed to a continuation of prosperous conditions on a basis not far from the level of 1926.

Tracing Use of Stamps

The first stamp of an official nature was that used by the postmaster of New York in 1842. Shortly afterward the law of 1845 established uniform postage at low rates, and postmasters in a number of cities issued stamps on their own responsibility. Such provisional issues of stamps were made in 1845 by postmasters in nine cities.

Reptile Inspires Fear

The domestic fowl will ignore any reptile, but a lapwing, curlew, or snipe will dash away from one as quickly as its wings will carry it. A parrot that has been kept in captivity for many years will show the greatest panic at the sight of a harmless grass snake.

ALPHABET BORN IN MIND OF EGYPTIAN

Theory Advanced by Chicago Scientist.

Picture a Semite thinker in old Egypt poring over a tablet of Egyptian picture writing. He knows something about the Egyptian hieroglyphs, how the sign for house, for example, is a boxlike drawing, vaguely suggestive of a child's picture of a house. Probably he knows how to write his name in the Egyptian, piecing it together in a series of simple signs to make up the sounds. And he has an idea.

From one inscription or a single series of inscriptions, the Semite, with a little help, perhaps, from an Egyptian friend, picks out some twenty-two signs that represent different consonant sounds in words. With these few signs, he believes, a kind of writing can be done that will be easier to spell out than the picture puzzles of the Egyptian. The signs he has chosen as letters are set down in the order of their appearance on the Egyptian inscription. And so the first crude alphabet is devised and ready for changes and improvements by other thinkers of many countries.

This theory as to how the alphabet was invented and how the letters were set down in order has just been advanced by Dr. B. L. Ullman of the University of Chicago. Doctor Ullman, who presented his theory at a meeting of archeologists at Cambridge, believes that the alphabet may be of greater antiquity than most scholars have considered likely.

The oldest specimens of writing believed to be in alphabet form are the crude Semite inscriptions found at Sinal in 1905. These inscriptions, Doctor Ullman said, have been generally dated as late as 1500 B. C., and that date has been widely used in recent years as the time of invention of alphabetic writing.

But three years ago inscriptions in Phoenician alphabetic writing almost as old as the Sinal writings were found at Byblos, in Syria. The letters of these inscriptions were considerably less crude than the Sinal writing, and Doctor Ullman points out that such progress in use of the alphabet as these Phoenician inscriptions show could not have taken place in one or two centuries.

The Sinal writings, he says, are probably quite as old as the most daring speculators have suggested. From this he is "inclined to set the origin of the alphabet at about 2000 B. C., namely about the Nineteenth century B. C., or earlier—fully 1,000 years earlier than was commonly believed a few years ago."

According to Doctor Ullman's conclusions, the Greeks must have got their alphabet from the Phoenicians much earlier than the Ninth or Tenth century B. C., which is the time generally accepted by scientists.

"The old Greek tradition," he said, "was that the alphabet was introduced by Cadmus in 733 B. C. My view is that this may be right, and in any case the Twelfth century is the latest possible date for the epoch-making event."

"Thus," he concludes, "the Greek alphabet may have existed at the time of the Trojan war, and must have existed when the Homeric poems were composed."

Exchange of Information

A very pleasant arrangement providing for an exchange of expert information of the subject of road construction has been arrived at between the United States and Germany. All data on construction methods, costs and results of experiments, as well as new machinery, will be transmitted from one to the other, and as both countries are giving a great deal of attention to this subject at the present time it is anticipated that the results will be very gratifying and helpful to both countries. This arrangement grew out of the visit to Berlin of the American delegates to the International Road congress, which took place in Milan a few months ago.

Strategy Saved Town

Wishing to extend the training grounds of a camp near the village of Villedieu, in the Vosges, the French military authorities decided to wipe out the little town by gunfire.

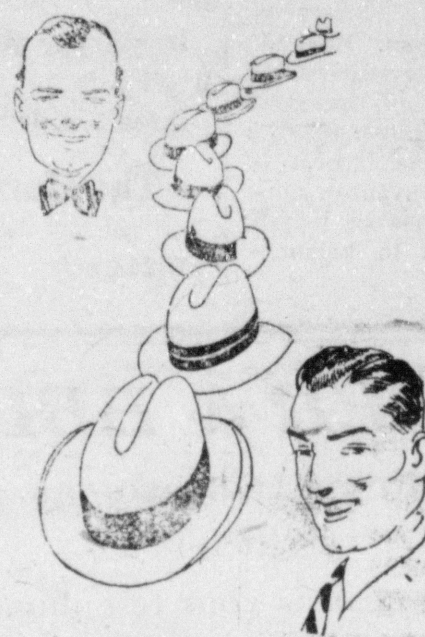

Their scheme has, however, been thwarted by the parish priest, who determined to do what he could to save the village from destruction. He searched through volumes of the laws of France, and found that his church could not be closed down so long as there were two attendants at daily mass. Since then the church has been thronged every day with villagers, who thus render the authorities powerless to carry out the destruction.

New Scholastic Idea

One semester each year for three years is spent in an industry as nearly allied as possible to their chosen line of work by students in the department of engineering at the College of the Pacific, Stockton, Calif. During the fifth year students remain continuously in college. This is said to be the only college west of the Mississippi following the co-operative plan of instruction, under which students are enabled, after the freshman year, to gain valuable first-hand experience in the work they expect to follow as a profession and at the same time to support themselves while attending college.

The European corn borer isn't the only insect that bores holes in cornstalks. Stalks sent to the Ohio State university from Clinton county this spring indicate the presence in southern Ohio of what is called the larger cornstalk borer, an insect usually found farther south and east.

As yet it is no menace.

Says Sam: The man from Missouri doesn't ask to be shown this time. Say he, together with other corn belt farmers, "Stop that Borer!"

Early fall beats spring as a time to seed the lawn.

Two million trees have been shipped to 300 landowners in 65 Ohio counties this spring from state forest nurseries.

Camps for farm women were held in nine Ohio counties in 1926, the agricultural college extension service at Columbus reports.

A sweet clover harvester that cuts the stalks and gets 85 or 90 per cent of the seed has been invented by H. P. Miller of Curtice, Ottawa, county.
